

ORGANIZED CRIME GROUPS AS SUBJECTS
OF ENDANGERING THE SECURITY

Milos Jankovic
Ministry of Defence of the Republic of Serbia
Brankica Jankovic
Gerontology Centre, Belgrade

Summary: The danger that organized crime and organized criminal groups represent today, as an element of internal organization of organized crime, is more than evident, considering that it takes a broad, transnational frameworks and therefore becomes, in addition to terrorism, the main security issue, challenge and risk of all modern societies. Organized criminal groups, in addition to “traditional”, often resort to new forms of criminal activity, while resorting to security threats in different ways. Due to the specificity of these ways of endangering the security, it is necessary to pay great attention to the methods of countering security threats, including prevention measures taken by all security structures, as well as their mutual cooperation and the timely and full information are most important.

Keywords: organized crime, endangering the security, organized criminal groups.

Pages 135-145