Summary: Administrative acts for fulfilment of financial obligations shall be enforced through the court and under the provisions of the law regulating the judicial execution procedure and the provisions of other laws applicable to judicial enforcing. The administrative acts that protect the police officers rights in labour relations shall be enforced through court if they are made out for fulfilment of financial obligations. However, in practice it is debatable when an administrative act is made out for the fulfilment of financial obligations and when it fulfils the conditions for judicial enforcing. The basic problem is the question as to whether the administrative act issued for the fulfilment of financial obligations which is not specifically defined, but is determinable, is eligible for execution or it is considered as a faulty administrative act. The subject of analysis here is the conduct of administrative and judicial authorities in resolving cases of police officers. In this article using a case study and application of basic and general scientific method the author sheds light on the problems perceived and offers guidelines for their solution.
